

War

ERIC BURMEISTER

The eyes of all orphans look the same.

The sobs of mourning—
of mothers, fathers, brothers and sisters—

is in no language.

The blood that soaks the earth
always runs red
while big little kings
forever speak with God.